Brian is a very talented and efficient software engineer. Over the course of time that we worked together I was impressed to see how quickly he was able to bring himself up to speed with new projects. He was eager to take on assignments, especially ones where he could learn something new.

He has been very easy to work with and was able to get along with everyone on the team. I personally felt a sense of comfort when he would take on a project, because I just knew that he would be contributing to the load the team was carrying, and get the job done quickly.

I would highly recommend him for any software engineering needs you have.
